Old college try

There's a cool Sacramento angle to this year's annual competition involving the top business students at seven Philadelphia-area universities.

Drexel, one of the participating schools, recently had its own internal competition to find a team to represent it at the April 8 event. The winner: a four-student group from Drexel's new Sacramento MBA program.

The local group won by coming up with the best alternatives for a fictional cable company weighing a buyout offer, says team member Robert Dodge, who works by day as an information technology director in Rocklin.

The Sacramento students joined the Drexel competition in Philadelphia via teleconferencing. The reaction from the other teams when the winner was announced?

"They were a little surprised," Dodge says, "and a little impressed."
