

Former ‘Carrier of the Year’ Becky Johnson receives Civic Engagement Scholarship

Placer High graduate Becky Johnson is one of three women awarded the Civic Engagement Scholarship by Drexel University Sacramento. Johnson, who was named Auburn Journal “Carrier of the Year” as a teenager, has had an accomplished professional career. She is the Senior Manager for PG&E’s Sacramento division, which includes Sacramento, Yolo, Solano and Colusa counties. She heads up the Energy Solutions & Service group and the division leadership team, which is focused on energy efficiency and resolving customer and public safety issues. Johnson has worked in the field of urban infrastructure for two decades, with previous positions in the construction, engineering and manufacturing sectors. She is a senior fellow and executive committee board member of the American Leadership Forum. Previously, she served as chair for Leadership Sacramento, president of the Junior League of Sacramento, and she is a graduate of Sacramento’s City Management Academy and the FBI Citizens’ Academy. An avid runner, she has completed more than 25 ultra marathons. She is a graduate of the University of California, Berkeley. Johnson will receive $15,000 scholarships to attend Drexel’s graduate program in Sacramento.