

Friday, January 7, 2011

Drexel's first master's students graduate Saturday

Sacramento Business Journal - by Kelly Johnson , staff writer

Date: Friday, January 7, 2011, 1:33pm PST

Drexel University's Center for Graduate Studies in Sacramento will recognize its first graduating class on Saturday.

The center, whose first students began classes in January 2009, has 35 students who have completed degrees in master's in business administration, library and information science, or information systems.

The students will attend a reception on Saturday at the Firehouse Restaurant in Sacramento, and a formal graduation in June, a news release said.

Nearly 100 working professionals should be eligible to participate in the commencement ceremonies in June.

Drexel's Sacramento center has enrolled more than 350 students in its doctorate and master's degree programs.

The Center for Graduate Studies has eight programs of study focused on entrepreneurial business, human resource development, higher education, public health, knowledge management and information science. Students attend class in the evenings and some weekends.

<http://www.bizjournals.com/sacramento/news/2011/01/07/drexels-first-masters-students.html>